- We have been happy enough with this test, but it seems the math portion is beginning to align with Common Core, and some of the phrasing or approach to problems is quite foreign to students learning Saxon Math.
- In the past we have tested in the fall, but this year we will test in the spring.
- This is our school's third year. The first year (2017-2018) our students (Grades 2-7) took the Stanford Achievement Test; in 2018-2019 our students in Grades 2-8 took the CTP-5. They found the test difficult, but we want to use this particular test as a way to measure how well our school is doing at teaching classical curriculum and particularly reasoning ability.
- We do not modify our curriculum to match the CTP-5 Standards.
- Our assistant head of school and teachers will access individual student scores as needed when additional information can be added to a recommendation for retention. Testing is never a basis for repeating a grade, but can be another data point to consider in the conversation.

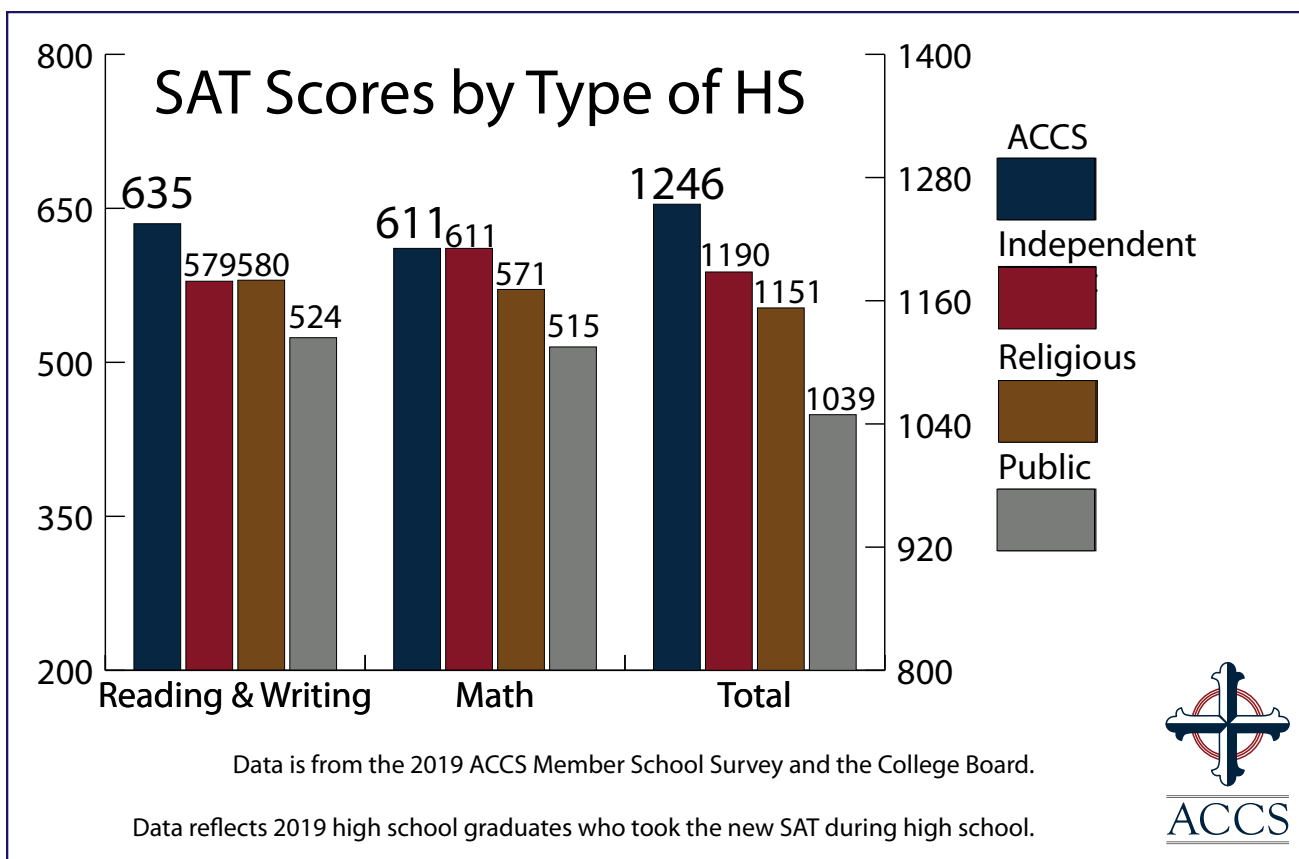

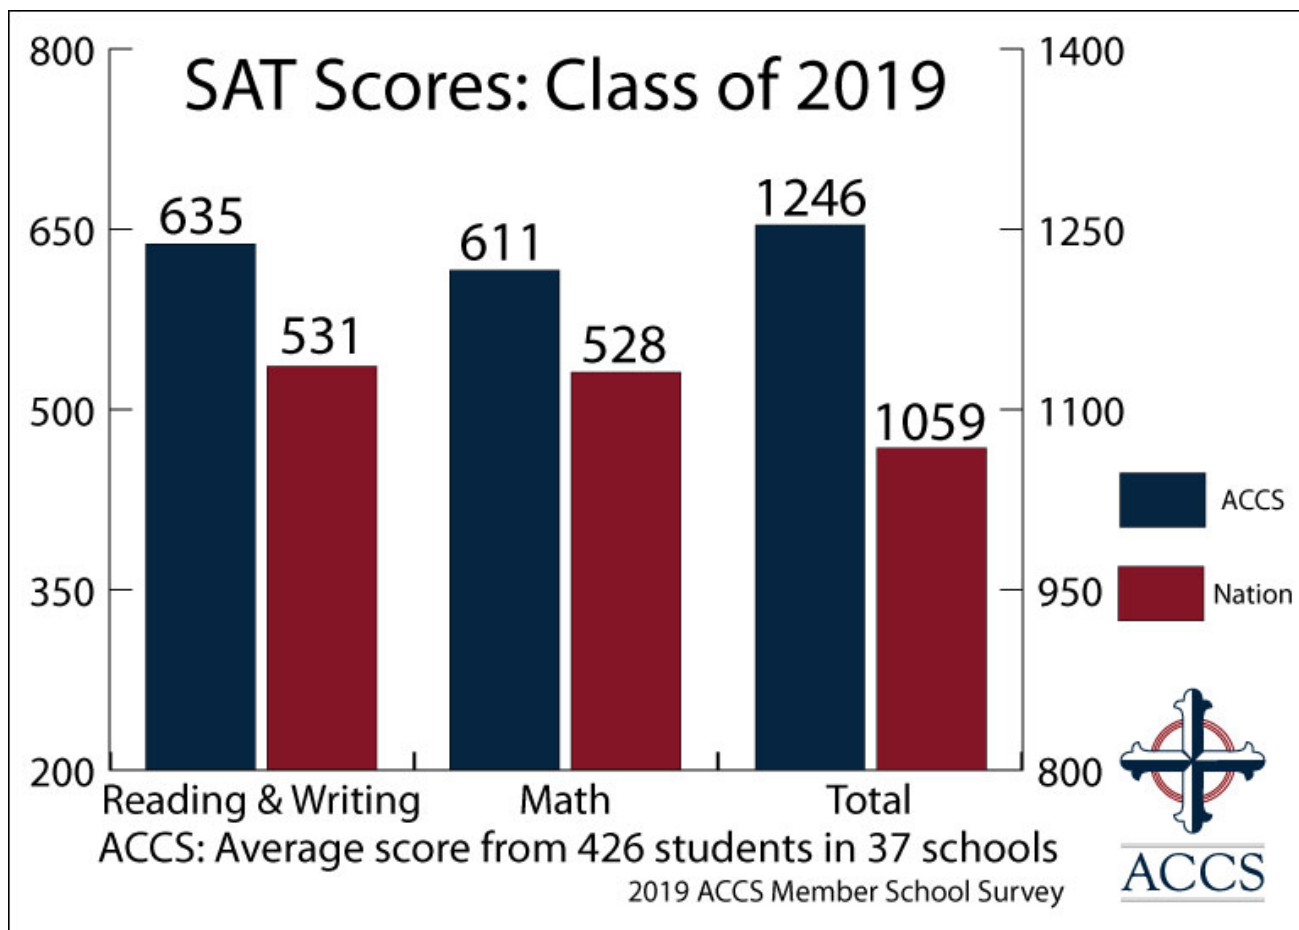

I am under the impression that ERB has no intention of creating a pencil and paper norm for the CTP5 with their increased emphasis on electronic delivery to students. Between the conversion table needed to compare scale scores from the CTP4 to the CTP5 and the very old norm group, we may be facing a data integrity issue. Individual schools cannot speak to this issue with ERB, but perhaps ACCS can.
